"Radio Baby" and Grandmother

A charming portrait study of the Contessa Bezzi Scala with her beautiful little granddaughter, Elettra Marconi, daughter of Senator Marconi, the "Father of Wireless," in the Contessa's villa at Rome. Due to the fact that her parents are obliged to spend much of their time in England, the little girl is taken care of most of the time by her grandmother, although she holds frequent radio conversations with her parents.

REQUESTS LEAD TO THE REPETITION OF A PLAY

"The Impersonator" Will Be Presented Again Tomorrow

HAS AMUSING MOMENTS

Due to the large number of requests received, St. Ann's players will tomorrow repeat their show, which played to such large crowds last week.

"The Impersonator" is the jolliest sort of farce, clean and sparkling all the way through. A professor of anatomy, splendidly portrayed by Richard Sabatini, is lured to a prize fight by his prospective son-in-law, Richard Heatherly, played by Vincent Galzerano.

The place is raided by the police, and the professor escapes to his home, followed by Jones, a traveling salesman, who sells hymn books and playing cards. Ralph Palermo's portrayal of Jones is all that could be desired.

The police are on the trail of Jones, who disguises himself by putting on a bishop's garb, and not a few embarrassing situations arise. Matters are further complicated by the arrival of the real bishop, in the person of John Paglione.

The enjoyment of the evening is further established by the antics of an escaped lunatic, who thinks he is an Indian—the part cleverly played by Arthur Angelo. James Spinelli as the policeman, and Frank Spezzano as the superintendent of the sanatorium, complete the male members of the cast.

Girls, young, pretty, charming ones add color and romance to the comedy. It is interesting to see Miss Marya Quaresmini play the affectionately bossy wife of the professor. She frequently informs the audience that she can well take care of her husband. The Misses Anna Rich and Adeline Rocco admirably play the role of daughters, and sprightly Helen Moffo, that of the ward.

Alvina, the object of the bishop's beautiful dreams and tender hopes, is portrayed by Miss Frances Tamburello. As the middle-aged woman in love, her acting is real and she displays histrionic ability. Miss Mary Tamburello, the mischievous gold-digger, the Swedish maid, keeps the audience amused by always appearing on the scene when she is least desired, with the result that she always collects.

GROUP OF DIRT FARMERS VISIT HOOVER, CONGRESS

Present Demands for Legislation to Aid Agriculture

BUCKS MAN SPOKESMAN

Two Bucks County dirt farmers, delegates to the National Farmers' Relief Conference, along with others, presented to President Hoover and Congress yesterday, their demands for legislation to aid agriculture.

The two from Bucks County were Philip Smith, New Hope; and Lewis C. Betzley, Perkasie. The former was spokesman for the group.

The committee of five called on the chief executive at the White House and read to him a petition demanding a farm debt moratorium, an end to evictions, price fixing for agricultural commodities and a $500,000,000 appropriation for farmers in distress.

Other members of the roughly-clad group of 250 farmers, who came from every section of the nation, gave copies of the petition to Vice-President Curtis and Speaker Garner. The demands were presented to the Senate and House.

Meanwhile, the Harrison bill providing for a two-year moratorium for taxes on mortgaged homes and farms became the focal point of relief moves in the Senate, Senator Harrison, Democrat, of Mississippi, predicting early approval.

This measure would authorize the

"Sugarfoot" Green Nabbed For Ice-Pick Murder

Phila., Dec. 10—George ("Sugarfoot") Green, wanted by police for the ice-pick murder of Detective Michael G. Croskey, was nabbed by detectives in West Philadelphia today near the scene of the murder.

Two witnesses to the crime told police Green wielded the ice-pick which severed the detective's jugular vein.

Green was seized by detectives when they raided a house on a search warrant which climaxed one of the greatest man-hunts in the criminal annals of Philadelphia. Green was a desperate character, twice serving jail terms for hitting policemen.

The actual motive for the slaying of Detective Croskey is believed to have been over a grudge the Negro held against Croskey. A row over a collision between Croskey's auto and Green's truck also was said to have been the cause of the stabbing.

TO BURY WANDERWELL AT SEA

Long Beach, Calif., Dec. 10.—One of the seas over which Captain Walter Wanderwell, murdered romantic adventurer, had sailed, will claim his body. His widow, Mrs. Aloha Wanderwell said today the body would be given to the Pacific from the deck of the ill-fated yacht, "Carma," at a point between Long Beach and the Catalina Islands. A chaplain and members of the crew will conduct the services.

"After that," Mrs. Wanderwell stated, "we will continue the cruise to the South Seas as the captain would have wished."

FIND 23 BODIES

Yancey, Kentucky, Dec. 10.—The bodies of 23 men killed by a dust explosion in Zero coal mine here yesterday had been found in the debris one and a half miles inside the workings today. Rescuers pushed their search for at least four more men known to have been in the mine when the blast sent the deadly black damp through the shaft. The bodies could not be brought out immediately because the passageways were filled with slate that fell from the roof as the explosion ripped through the mine.

SHAW REARS IN DIGNITY

(Copyright 1932, by I. N. S.)

London, England, Dec. 10.—George Bernard Shaw, bad boy of English letters, reared in all his dignity today and spoke his mind about the attempt of women's organizations to exclude Prof. Albert Einstein from the United States on the grounds of being a "communist."

"Keep Einstein out of America?" growled Shaw. "They can't do that. Why, I'm a communist and they haven't tried to keep me out. Every intelligent man in Europe is a communist today."

NEWPORTVILLE MAN ACQUITTED AFTER TRIAL BY JURY

James Dougherty Must Pay the Costs in the Case

EVIDENCE WAS LACKING

Other Cases Disposed Of Before Judges Keller and Boyer

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 10.—James Dougherty, of Newportville, was acquitted on a charge of assault and battery by automobile, when Judge Keller directed the verdict on the grounds the Commonwealth had failed to produce evidence of negligence necessary in such cases. Judge Keller said that the costs were a question for the jury to decide and after a short deliberation, they were placed on the defendant.

Dougherty was arrested as a result of an accident on October 5 at the intersection of the Street Road and Hulmeville Road, when a car owned by Francis Martinelli and the defendant's car collided.

Laurence Durnan, charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, went on trial in Judge Keller's court. Durnan was arrested following an accident on the Easton Highway near Ottsville, when one man was burned to death and the defendant himself was badly burned when their car crashed into the rear end of a stone truck and caught fire.

Greysberg Steward, colored, Horatio Howe and Frederick Taylor, witnesses for the Commonwealth, testified John Bauer was killed in a smash-up between the Taylor truck and one driven by Petrozak on August 31.

Bauer, who died in the Abington Hospital from a fractured skull, two broken legs and internal injuries, was pinned between the trucks. He died 12 hours later.

Howe, a driver on the Taylor truck, also suffered a broken leg and was removed to the Abington Hospital.

Taylor, owner of the truck, which was parked along the highway, near Pipersville, was examining the cab on his truck when the collision occurred.

Corporal W. R. Engle, of the Pennsylvania Highway Patrol, testified Petrozak, the defendant, stated he did not see any lights on the Taylor truck which was partly parked on the highway.

Petrazak did not see Bauer and Taylor standing beside their truck because they were not in the rays of their lights, it was testified.

The Court appointed as counsel for the defendant, C. William Freed. He was assisted by Willard Curtin, of Morrisville, the youngest member of the Bucks County Bar.

DEPRESSION HASN'T HIT MARRIAGE LICENSES

130 Couples Granted Permits to Marry in November at Doylestown

CAME FROM SIX STATES

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 10.—"The depression surely has not hit us," declared Deputy Clerk of Orphans Court Jacob L. Shelly with the announcement that 130 couples had been granted marriage licenses in Bucks county during November. The numbes granted during this month is just nine less than during the corresponding month last year.

According to Deputy Clerk Shelly, to date licenses have been granted to 1470 couples since the beginning of this year. At the end of November, 1931, a total of 1460 couples had received licenses to wed. It is believed this year's record will surpass that of last year.

As is usually the case, Trenton, N. J., and other towns in the vicinity of Trenton furnished the greatest number of prospective brides and grooms, Trenton alone having sent 35 male and 31 female applicants to Bucks county for marriage licenses.

Philadelphia also had a share in sending its representatives to the county seat for their permits for marriage. That city sent to Bucks county 23 prospective grooms and 27 prospective brides.

Bucks county supplied only 41 female applicants and 29 male applicants for licenses, Morrisville taking the lead with four men and 5 women.

The records show that residents of New Jersey, Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina, New York and Ohio applied here for their permits to wed.

In one instance a prospective groom of 34 was granted a license to wed a lass of 16 and in another instance a groom of 47 took as his life partner a

WORLD TRIP TOLD OF BY BUCKS PUBLISHER

MANY MEN GIVE TALKS

SELLERSVILLE, Dec. 10.—"Men—Great, Near-Great and Ingrate That I Have Met," was the topic of a delightful talk given by Charles Meredith, Quakertown, publisher of the Quakertown Free Press, when over 150 Kiwanians from Doylestown, Quakertown, Lansdale and Sellersville, met for the inter-club meeting held here. This banner meeting of the Southeastern Kiwanis division, which is headed by Lt. Governor Carmon Ross, was one of the outstanding ones of the year.

Kiwanian Samuel Althouse, president of Sellersville Club, presided. Greetings were extended to the guests after a dinner had been participated in.

Mr. Meredith, former Sheriff of Bucks county, recently returned from a trip around the world, in his original manner, gave a brief resume of some of the few high-lights of his trip, on which he was accompanied by Mrs. Meredith.

He spoke of dining at the Captain's table from San Francisco to Honolulu. In Honolulu, Mr. Meredith was the guest of Editor Thurston, of the Honolulu Advertiser, who is just completing a new building many stories high overlooking the city. Editor Thurston, he said, is a graduate of Columbia University and the University of Missouri.

Governor Farrington also entertained the speaker in Honolulu and took him to the pineapple reservations where millions are going to waste.

DEGREES OF CHARITY

The twelfth-century Jewish savant, Moses Ben Maimonides, held that there were eight degrees of charity and enumerated them as follows:

"To give, but with reluctance or regret.

"To give cheerfully, and proportionately, but not until solicited.

"To give cheerfully, proportionately, and even unsolicited, but to put it in the poor man's hand, thereby exciting in him the painful emotion of shame.

"To give charity in such a way that the distressed may receive the bounty, and know their benefactor, without their being known to him.

"To know the objects of our bounty but to remain unknown to them.

"To bestow charity in such a way that the benefactor may not know the relieved persons, nor they the names of their benefactors.

"To anticipate charity by preventing poverty; namely, to assist the reduced fellow-men, either by a considerable gift, or a sum of money, or by teaching him a trade, or by putting him in the way of business, so that he may earn an honest livelihood and not be forced to the dreadful alternative of holding out his hand for charity."

America during the next few months will have great need for all eight of them. Having failed to attain the eighth degree, which is the summit of charity's golden ladder, it will be content with even the first. Yet there never was an easier time to give charity of the seventh degree. Surely there is no one, who has more than his own needs require, in which the spirit of charity is not strong today.

RAILROAD DICTATOR

Politically the United States has no time for dictators and czars; in business and finance it is turning more and more to dictatorship. Several great industries are now under the iron heel of one-man rule and like it.

When the cinema empire threatened to topple of its own weight a decade ago the industry turned to a "czar." Divided, it faced disaster. United under one arbitrary head it weathered the storm.

Organized baseball was headed toward loss of public confidence and support because of internal friction, cut-throat competition between the clubs and corruption of players when it dumped its troubles into the lap of Judge Landis and made him the "czar" of all baseballdom. It proved good medicine.

North Atlantic steamship companies got into difficulties when their business fell off and elected their own Neptune to rule the seas. Little about their troubles has since been heard.

All this history about czars and dictatorship in America must be known to the railroad managements and probably had a great deal to do with the decision of 30 western roads to appoint an "umpire." "Umpire" Harry G. Taylor will have no power to enforce his rulings but the lines have agreed to accept his rulings as final, which amounts to the same thing.

TRADE NOTES

Today is the last day of the special demonstration by a foot comfort expert from the New York staff of Dr. W. M. Scholl, at Moffo's Shoe Shop, 311 Mill street, to assist the foot comfort expert located at the Moffo store. Without cost those visiting the Moffo Store will receive: Pedo-graph prints of stockinged feet which reveal exact condition; complete test and analysis of feet, and advice as to proper shoes; demonstration on your feet of how the proper Dr. Scholl application or remedy gives immediate relief; sample of Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads.

"It outlasts the car," states Percy G. Ford, 1776 Farragut avenue, in speaking of Kelwax which acts like a weatherproof lacquer, and for which there is a great demand at Mr. Ford's establishment. Best of all Kelwax whisks away traffic film, and "does away with polisher's backache."

"Keep fit" is the advice of Dr. Botwin, dentist of 409 Mill street, who is advertising special holiday prices on plates. This, together with the fact that teeth are extracted free when other work is done, is an excellent inducement for those in need of dental care.

STATE NEWS

PITTSBURGH — (INS) — Professional sports promoters here are mothering thoughts of giving Pittsburgh an entry in the National Football League and of returning to major league hockey.

Professional gridders have long contended that Pittsburgh is a spot where monetary returns would be worthwhile. The promoters, however, have deferred the investment because of the effectiveness with which Pennsylvania's blue laws, prohibiting commercial entertainment on the Sabbath, are being enforced here.

Competing for the patronage now enjoyed by the numerous colleges and universities located in and near Pittsburgh for the Saturday "gate" has been considered impractical.

With the movement for repeal of the blue laws steadily gaining momentum, talk of a Pittsburgh "pro" football team and of bringing back professional ice hockey has again been revived.

SYNOPSIS

Dr. John Wolfe, old Dr. Montague Threadgold's assistant, is stunned at the unsanitary conditions he finds in the smug little town of Navestock. Wolfe realizes his greatest fight in ridding the town of pollution will be in overcoming the resentful attitude of the people themselves who seem perfectly satisfied with their mode of living. He encounters his first obstacle in the person of Jasper Turrell, the brewer, who objects to Wolfe taking a sample of his well water for analysis. Undaunted by opposition, Wolfe continues his researches and prepares a map of the town's unsanitary areas. The one bright spot in Navestock is the home of Mrs. Mary Mascall where Wolfe is always sure of a welcome. He is exceptionally fond of Mrs. Mascall's young daughter, Jess. Wolfe is summoned to the home of elderly Miss Perfrement, who feigns heart attacks to attract attention.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

Wolfe made a beginning.

"Will you let me see what I can do for you?"

"It's my heart. I'm dying. Eliza, I'm dying. Where is Dr. Threadgold?"

Wolfe imprisoned Miss Perfrement's wrist. She gave a rebellious squirm and then went rigid, but Wolfe was able to feel her pulse.

"Now, my dear madam!"

"Eliza, I'm dying!"

The gaunt maid came to Wolfe's elbow.

"D'you think, sir, you understand Miss Perfrement's case?"

"Kindly keep quiet a moment."

Eliza stared and knitted up her black eyebrows, but Wolfe's tone had smothered her officiousness. Dr. Threadgold was a very different sort of man. He was always polite to Miss Perfrement's maid.

"How often does your mistress have these attacks?"

"Very often."

"Thank you. Now, Miss Perfrement, I shall want to examine your chest. If you will let your maid unfasten your bodice."

"Sir!"

Miss Perfrement stiffened.

"Very well; I dare say I can manage without."

Miss Perfrement's maid stroked her mistress's hair, and looked down at Wolfe with sceptical contempt. Dr. Threadgold could always manage matters without all this fussing. He had only to look at a patient, and to listen sympathetically to a vivid description of the symptoms in order to discover what was wrong.

Wolfe stood up and looked steadily at Miss Perfrement.

"I can assure you that there is no cause for alarm."

"I'm dying. I know I'm dying! My heart's turning over and over!"

"My dear madam—it is not. You are worrying yourself into a panic. Will you give your mistress a tumblerful of hot water, and send round for some medicine?"

"Send for dear Dr. Threadgold, dear, good, clever, Dr. Threadgold!"

"I beg your pardon. I shall be obliged if you will follow my instructions."

Wolfe looked at the woman, and then at her mistress. He was not tempted to dissemble the truth, and to give honey and humbug where asafoetida was needed. He and Miss Perfrement were better apart.

"Do so, sir. I should think you had better, sir."

Dr. Threadgold kept the midday meal waiting for more than an hour. He had been caught on the way home and hurried in to minister to Miss Priscilla Perfrement in her anguish. At the dinner table Threadgold appeared perturbed and testy. He contradicted his wife without sweetening the contradiction, looked at Wolfe severely over the rims of his spectacles, and talked with pompous irritability on the responsibilities of public men. He glanced at Wolfe as they pushed back their chairs.

"For what we have received may the Lord make us truly thankful. My dear, tell the cook not to send up onions. Mr. Wolfe, I have a few words to say to you in the consulting-room."

Wolfe went, following the twinkle of his employer's stout little legs. Threadgold was solemn and sententious. He was slightly afraid of Wolfe, and his nervousness made him prance.

"What did you say, sir, to Miss Perfrement this morning? You seemed to have treated her with extreme brusqueness. She was greatly upset."

"I told her the truth."

"What do you mean by the truth? Do you know that Miss Perfrement is subject to heart attacks?"

"It was not a heart attack this morning, sir. And yet her maid told me it was typical."

"Indeed, indeed. And what do you suggest?"

"Miss Perfrement appears to be a lady who likes little scenes and has a rather foolish thirst for sympathy."

Dr. Threadgold's white waistcoat was like a great, round, scandalised countenance.

"Do you mean to say, Mr. Wolfe, that you told Miss Perfrement she was a fool!"

"I told her that there was no cause for alarm. And she did not appear satisfied."

"No!"

"I suppose—— Oh, well, I think you had better warn me, sir, against such cases."

Threadgold strutted irritably across the room.

"Mr. Wolfe, sir, when shall I teach you tact! Tact is the one thing that a doctor must cultivate. It is one of the essentials."

"I quite understand you."

"I must insist upon your using proper discretion. And by the way, there is another matter about which I wish to speak. We are using more drugs than usual. I see that two large orders have gone out to Murchison and Company in the last three months. We have never used anything like the quantity before."

"I have given what was necessary, sir."

"No doubt. But I see you have a liking for the more expensive preparations. Probably you are ignorant of the relative cost, and you have dispensed away gallons of tinctures. It is unnecessary extravagance. In most cases the simple preparations are just as efficacious, and I can't afford to pour expensive medicines down the throats of paup—of half the town."

"I have only given what I considered right. I suppose, sir, you don't want me to withhold the proper drugs?"

Threadgold flared up.

"Mr. Wolfe, sir, you misunderstand me. I am a gentleman and a Christian. But sheer waste, the needless using of expensive preparations!"

"I will try to exert my tact, sir."

Threadgold glanced at him, and suddenly became deflated like a child's balloon pricked with a pin.

"We will say no more, Mr. Wolfe, we will say no more. You have a very clumsy touch, sir. You will have to lighten it in order to succeed in general practice."

Pennsylvania In Grip Of Snow And Low Temperature

Keen winter laid its icy hands on Pennsylvania today and blanketed the state with a whirling snowfall and sent the mercury tumbling to new lows for the winter season to date.

Icy gales were coming in from the Middle West and at 7 a. m. the winds whipped a shifting snow fall eastward from the Ohio line.

Overcast skies and falling mercury was general throughout eastern Pennsylvania where light snow fell at 11 a. m.

Snow flurries also swept through Berks County early today where a temperature of 20 degrees was reported.

Newportville Man Acquitted After Trial By Jury

Roy E. Johnson, Doylestown, was acquitted by a jury on charges of aggravated assault and battery and assault and battery by automobile. Judge Keller directed that the defendant be acquitted because the Commonwealth had failed to prove a case of negligence against the defendant. Judge Keller sent the case to the jury on the question of costs, the jury deciding to place them on the county.

Johnson was arrested on the information of George E. Jones, of Philadelphia, following an accident at Buckingham on August 28th this year. Jones was headed for Doylestown on the Buckingham pike and Johnson was headed toward Buckingham. The two cars collided on a curve before the village of Buckingham is entered when coming from Doylestown.

Corporal William Engle, of the Doylestown sub-station of State Highway Patrol, testified that Johnson told him that he was following another car at the time and that when the car slowed down, Johnson pulled out to pass the car. As he did the Jones car was noticed to be approaching him. To avoid an accident, Johnson then headed his car for a side road leading off the main highway, when the collision occurred.

Judge Keller suspended sentence on Russell Shive, thirty-four, of Warrington, and placed him on probation for one year, after Shive had pleaded guilty to committing an assault and battery on William Kostenbader, his landlord. Shive admitted that he had gotten into several arguments and it was because of a disagreement over money and rent.

Judge Keller, upon the suggestion of District Attorney Eastburn, advised Shive to get out of Kostenbader's home within two weeks and find another place to live.

tended a meeting of the very exclusive "Discussion Club," taking part in that meeting.

Over in Palestine he met and conversed by the aid of an interpreter, with the outstanding leader of all the Arabs, with the leader of the Samaritans and with many other notables.

In Rome, Editor Meredith called on Mussolini but found that the great leader was in Milan at the time interviewing newly-married couples.

"Italy is getting along," Editor Meredith declared. "Italy has solved the problem of unemployment. Mussolini is taking state funds and with them is building roads, completing excavations of Pompeii and doing many things. More Italians are going back to Italy annually than are leaving Italy for other countries. And, incidentally, Italy is going to pay her debts to the United States. Italy for the first time this year raised sufficient wheat to meet her demands."

Editor Meredith was quite fortunate in Rome, having an audience with the Pope. He said that "meeting the Pope is not so difficult, but that it does take time." It was first necessary after permission had been granted to get a black dress for Mrs. Meredith, with high neck and long skirt. The Pope, Editor Meredith declared, has a fine face and senses his responsibility and position.

The various club presidents were introduced by Toastmaster Althouse.

President C. L. Goodling, Doylestown club, speaking for the 39 members who attended the meeting, said that it was his opinion as well as that of every Kiwanian in Doylestown that the club is about to enter its banner year, headed by Judge Calvin S. Boyer, whom he introduced.

Ralph Smith, superintendent of the Lansdale schools and president of the Lansdale club, offered greetings and introduced the new president elect, Carroll Johnson, North Wales.

Rev. James R. Shepley, president-elect of Sellersville Kiwanis, and President-elect Ralph Gerhart, of the Quakertown club, were introduced.

A leadership training school for all new club officers including the directors and retiring officers as well, to be conducted by the Glenside Kiwanis Club at the Casi Conti, Weldon, on Thursday night, December 15, was announced by Lieutenant Governor Ross. The dinner meeting will take place at 6.30, to be followed by the training class instruction.

Amusing and clever stunts were staged by the various clubs in attendance. Quakertown staged a miniature minstrel from their own "broadcasting station;" Doylestown staged a short skit, "Experiences of a Couple of City Guys at the Sellersville Trolley Station"; Lansdale conducted a spelling bee among its members.

Eighty-six of the male applicants and 75 of the female applicants were between the ages of 21 and 30. Three men and three women between the ages of 60 and 70 made application to wed.

Group of Dirt Farmers Visit Hoover, Congress

Reconstruction Corporation to make loans for tax payments. No new appropriation would be required.

Mr. Smith, spokesman for the group which went to the White House, told newspapermen Mr. Hoover "received us very well and listened to our statement," but did not "make any positive comment on our request, explaining it was all new to him and that he could not give an immediate answer."

Vice-President Curtis told the group calling on him that he had always been "anxious" to help the farmers and had been instrumental in his State in having farm mortgages extended.

"I do," replied Mr. Curtis, adding he hoped something could be done now to aid farmers with mortgaged properties. As soon as the Senate convened he presented the petition in person.

Speaker Garner told his visitors he would refer the petition to the proper committee and "see that it receives the usual attention."

During the day, the three-way farm relief plan embodying the equalization fee, the export debenture and domestic allotment methods was urged at a conference of House Independents by John A. Simpson, president of the Farmers National Union.

Today, spokesmen for the farmers' conference will appear before the independent group. The conference adopted a resolution Thursday night which leaders interpreted as opposing the three farm relief plans.
